Sponsored Tram #61 Exhibition

Traditional cultures are always being considered as trade-offs in our modernization process. Many local traditional craftsmanship are gradually declining and losing relevance in our community. In view of this, the “Classic Craft, Modern Meaning” programme has been developed to help seeking new dimensions of some traditional arts such as mahjong tiles and birdcage crafts. The programme comprises of a series of exhibitions and workshops in which experienced masters and contemporary artists exchanged ideas and skills to create art pieces.

Designed and made using fading crafts and techniques in local tram depots, Hong Kong trams are chosen by “Classic Craft, Modern Meaning” for its cultural and historical significance to pay tribute to local craftsmanship, and also demonstrate how art could be publicly accessible in the hope that those precious crafts can be sustained from generation to generation, as well as a contribution to our society.
